

Francine Coughlin Launches Behavioral Consulting Program for Non-Profit Dog Rescues and Shelters

Francine Coughlin is now offering both in-person and remote consulting services tailored specifically for non-profit dog rescues and animal shelters in the US and abroad. Francine is a certified dog behavior consultant specializing in canine behavior assessment and rehabilitation as well as a non-profit dog rescue founder and operator.

With extensive experience working with dogs displaying fear, anxiety, reactivity, aggression, and stress-related behaviors, as well as hands on work within the shelter and rescue system for 20 years, Coughlin's consulting services are designed to help rescue organizations improve outcomes for dogs while supporting staff, volunteers, fosters, and adopters through practical, humane, science-based and behavior-focused strategies.

Services available to rescue organizations and shelters include:

- Behavioral assessments and consultations
- Intake evaluations and behavior triage support
- Foster and volunteer education and coaching
- Shelter enrichment and behavior modification planning
- Adoption match guidance and transition support
- Remote case reviews and virtual consultations
- Staff training on canine body language, handling, and behavior protocols
- Program development for behavior support and safety practices

Non-profit rescues, municipal shelters, foster-based organizations, and volunteer teams interested in learning more about consulting services are encouraged to reach out for additional information or to schedule an initial consultation.
